Comments : I recently read in the Sun-Sentinel where FPL is going to seek recovery for the costs incurred by Hurricane Irma. I don't think it is fair to expect consumers to to pay for this, since FPL has yet to disclose the costs of Matthew, but yet collected millions of dollars in recovery fees, as well as the billions of dollars collected through the years for "network hardening". Had the network been prepared, 95% of their customers would not have lost power, many for up to a week after the storm, or would people have died as a result. FPL posts over a billion dollars a year in PROFIT. Let them use those funds to pay for a storm they were whoafully ill-prepared for. What FPL is doing is criminal and should no longer be allowed.
