Dear Public Service Commission PSC,

As a Floridian age 70+, I'm focusing on rebuilding my life and community and don't want to worry about a higher power bill. Along with the financial hardships from the Hurricane Michael, as well as skyrocketing healthcare and housing prices and minimal increases in Social Security, an increase in monthly bills add up for people, like myself, who are on fixed incomes.

I think you have a lot of gall to expect your loyal customers to pay for the damages done to your equipment. Do you not have emergency funds to pay for rebuilding? Do you not think this community is economically hurting at this time? Do you not think it will be years before the community and the average citizen will be financially solvent again? I have a bright idea, reduce the salaries of everyone in your company who makes over $300,000 to half, and use those funds.

DO NOT increase Gulf Power charges. We the consumers are trying to rebuild our homes and our lives. We do not need additional expenses put on us to pay for a company's damage from the hurricane in order to keep their profit margin high. Give us a break.

SINCERELY,
EVELYN CENTRONE
