CUSTOMER COMMENTS

As a Florida Power & Light (FPL) customer, I take offense to AARP representing this rate proposal as excessive. While no one likes their bills to go up, FPL is not impervious to rising prices that everybody else is also seeing. In fact, they are a capital-intensive business and are affected more than most by inflation.

I find that the value received for the electricity that I consume to be a relative bargain. Look at what I spend per day (avg. < $5.00/day) and what I receive in return. I guarantee that I wouldn't choose to do without it for the price. Everyone already has that option. Compare that expense to some other things that one readily spends money on without question.

Utilities can't generate electricity and distribute it for free. They deserve a fair chance at their business like anyone else. My service has been impeccable, and I think FPL fairly earns its money.

Thank you for your time and consideration.
