Hi Ann-

Please take a look at Mr. Forhand's email below. I think Mr. Forehand is correct and the 15k penalty amount applies to issue 2 as well. (FYI- I am out of the office at a customer meeting trip Monday and Tuesday) Thanks very much.

Issue 2 on the attached vote sheet appears to be in error. It indicates that if Aloha pays the $5000 the issue is resolved. I do not think this is correct.

Please review and respond!

Ref: Aloha Utilities PSC Docket Nos 060122-WU and 060606-WU and Senator Fasano's letter dated November 20, 2007

Dear Ms. Edgar,

Again it has been proven that Aloha Utilities does NOT have the management, engineering, or technical expertise to implement a sophisticated water treatment process to clean up their black-smelly water. It has been determined that the excess amount of brine being created would have a negative impact on the environment, thus the DEP will not approve the permitting for Aloha to proceed with the implementation of the installation of the equipment.

It is time for you and Mr. Cooke to step up to the plate and start doing what is best for the citizens of this state rather than defending the utility. You need to start deletion proceedings against Aloha Utilities and turn over the territory to Pasco County Utilities who has the experience to provide a quality water product.

I totally support Senator Fasano in his efforts to remove Aloha's territory. You need to listen to what thousands of the captive customers of Aloha have been telling you for over 15 years ... get rid of Aloha Utilities.

Please make sure this letter is posted on Aloha's dockets.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Edgar,

I am enclosing a whole house filter that I changed yesterday. I would like to remind you of the kind of water we receive from Aloha Utilities. This is water that is being filtered before it gets INTO the home. Aloha Utilities and their attorneys want you to believe that it is the copper pipes within the home that is causing the problem. Not so as you can see and smell.

Why you and the PSC continue to defend and support Aloha Utilities is beyond me.

Why would Aloha put the installation of this new system into the hands of a college professor? This just shows that Aloha does not have the technical or management expertise to run their company. Attorneys sure do NOT know anything about providing a quality water product.

Please make sure this is posted on Aloha's dockets.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Edgar,

Again Aloha Utilities has found another excuse and delay not to implement the anion exchange system as agreed upon in the agreement Aloha has with the customers and the PSC.

I wrote Mr. Cooke several weeks ago to start deletion proceedings against Aloha Utilities and to date I have not heard back from him. So I am assuming he is now on the side of Aloha Utilities and not captive customers. Mr. Cooke has failed miserably!

The customers were very specific at the customer/PSC meeting in March, 2006 in which Rick Melson, then with the PSC, stated that the PSC would NOT put up with any delays in the implementation of the agreement by Aloha Utilities. He told us that was a promise by the PSC! But yet that is all the PSC has done is to accept delays without penalties imposed on Aloha. But here we are more than 1 ¾ years later and Aloha has NOT proceeded to implement the anion exchange system, but to come up with yet another excuse. Aloha Utilities does NOT have the technical expertise or the management know-how to implement such a system, because Aloha is run by attorneys.

I am pleading with you to start aggressive deletion proceedings of Aloha's territory with instructions to Pasco Commissioners/Utilities to take over Aloha's territory. It is time for the PSC to step up to the plate and taken action. We have waited over 15 years for the PSC to do something. NOW DO SOMETHING except side with Aloha! All current and future rate increases requested by Aloha need to be DENIED.

Please make sure this is posted on Aloha's dockets.

Sincerely,

Richard Power

Aloha Says Consultant Is Slowing Water Fix

By CHRISTIAN M. WADE
The Tampa Tribune
Published: Sep 8, 2007

NEW PORT RICHEY—The former University of South Florida professor who was working for Aloha Utilities Inc. on a plan to resolve longstanding water quality problems has failed to produce final reports on the instillation of a new filtration system.

That will mean more delays in resolving those issues, company officials told state regulators this week.

Audrey Levine, an environmental scientist working under contract for the private utility, left USF in December to work for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Levine has been a consultant for Aloha since 2004, when the utility hired USF to work on a solution to the "black water" contamination of its wells. She was finalizing reports on the design, permitting and instillation of the new filtration system.

Those documents haven't materialized, however.

In a Sept. 5 letter to General Counsel Michael Cooke of the Public Service Commission, Aloha's attorney John Wharton said the utility has not been able to obtain the information from Levine.

"Aloha has done everything it could do, orally and in writing, to convince, cajole, persuade and even threaten against Dr. Levine or USF in an attempt to secure Dr. Levine's follow through on her promises to aid in the project," he wrote.

Wharton warned that the missing reports will delay the process.

"Her input, and the data and other information which form the basis of her conclusions, are absolutely essential for Aloha to proceed," Wharton wrote. "Unfortunately, we have now reached a point where we must formally inform all of the parties to our settlement that definite delays have resulted from the failure to receive Dr. Levine's reports."

Numerous phone calls to Levine's home in Washington and her offices at the EPA were not returned. USF officials declined to comment on the status of her reports.

Steve Reilly, a representative from the state Office of Public Counsel who is overseeing the Aloha settlement process, called the missing reports a "disturbing development."

"This is another potential delay," he said. "We're hoping that it will be resolved."

For years, customers have complained of a dark color and sulfur odor in the water from the private utility, which serves about 25,000 households in Seven Springs and Trinity.

A previous USF report, conducted by Levine, attributed the problems to an excess of hydrogen sulfide, an organic compound found in most potable water systems.

The solution lies in a fixed-bed anion exchange system, which involves water passing through a filtration system attached to the wells. In recent studies, the new technology has proved effective for removing hydrogen sulfide from most drinking-water systems.

In April 2005, the state Public Service Commission unanimously approved a settlement between Aloha and customer representatives aimed at resolving the problems.

The deal says Aloha must install an anion exchange system at its five treatment plants. The company estimated the fix will cost customers $6 a month per household or an estimated $6.1 million in proposed rate increases during the next several years.

Steve Watford, Aloha's president, said his utility has taken significant actions, securing a $20 million bond to pay for bulk water and paying the county $4.9 million in impact fees.

Implementation of the settlement, however, has been plagued by setbacks.

Four months ago, Aloha executives sparred with state Sen. Mike Fasano, R-New Port Richey, over delays in securing an agreement to buy bulk water from Pasco County.

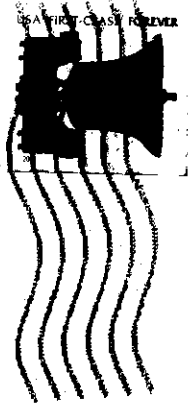

Aloha executives blamed county officials for the delays and said they are complying with the settlement terms and are working on designs for the filtration system.

County officials fired back that they weren't to blame for the delays.

Dear Mr. Power,

I will be happy to have your name placed on the Interested Persons lists for these two dockets. Please provide me with your mailing address and telephone number as you want them to appear in our Case Management system and I will forward your request to our Clerk's Office.

Regarding the warning language that you reference below, please be advised that this language appears on all dockets as a matter of course. It's purpose is to notify all interested persons that the Commission calendar is subject to change for various scheduling reasons. It does not make tentative any agreements between parties to a case. Aloha is fully responsible for carrying out the terms of the settlement agreement reached in the deletion case.

Best regards,
