Subject: Control rising utility rates

Dear Commissioner

Constantly rising utility rates, along with outrageous property insurance rates and terms, are imposing an unreasonable burden upon the senior residents of the state of Florida. We are ideally situated to take advantage of low cost natural power generation methods such as solar, wind, and tidal current and should not even have fuel surcharges any longer. As for storm hardening charges, those should be the utility companies investment in future prosperity of the company. No one pays me to protect my property from storm damage. As a matter of fact, insurance companies are allowed to penalize me if I don't. How about giving every customer who loses power after a storm a credit for lost service?

Thank you,

Joseph Koren
